Torrance to Follow 'Chain of Command' System

In summary, the chain of command as a policy and instrument of administrative control is so vital, so necessary, and so well accepted that a philosophy of management which did not include this principle would certainly bring about disastrous results to the administrative affairs of any organization.

(10) The police administration should be advised that our office will give it full cooperation in the matter of providing information from our investigation which may be needed in the event any disciplinary proceedings arise out of this investigation.

It is the intention of the City Manager's office to accept the invitation of the Attorney General's office regarding the substantiation of charges against individual members of the city's classified service. It is felt this meeting is necessary in order that there may be a basis upon which to take further disciplinary action, if warranted. In the interim two police officers were suspended pending the filing of more specific and official charges. I am reluctant to discuss the specifics of the disciplinary action which has been taken. We feel that each and every Police Department employee, or any other employee of the city, is entitled to hear charges made against him and have an opportunity to defend himself against those charges prior to public release of the charge. Such safeguards are mandatory to prevent innocent people from being tried by public opinion before due process of law can be effectuated. If, on the other hand, we have taken the wrong action, we will be the first to approach the Council and ask that full reimbursement be made to any employee who has been improperly disciplined. This morning Deputy Attorney General Jack Goertzen reconfirmed our Friday, March 13th, appointment regarding this recommendation. /s/ Edward J. Ferraro
